Stores Layout Overview

The stores layout should be one of the key strategies in your success. A stores layout influences your consumer's behaviour by directing the stores flow, merchandise placement and general ambiance. Consumers prefer a pleasant shopping environment where aisles are wide, the merchandise is easy to find and there are sufficient items.

The longer the consumer stays within the store the higher the chances they will pick up more products. The average basket value of items the consumer will purchase will increase with the amount of time they spend in store.

Top Tips for a great store layout

1. Have enough space between products and fixtures
2. Display a variety of fragrances giving the consumer options
3. Present clear signage to help the consumers navigate to the product of their choice
4. Freshen up your displays regularly
5. Keep your displays well replenished

Why is replenishment important?

- Full shelves give a better impression to the consumer than empty ones
- Seeing a full shelf, consumers are more likely to look and buy items from it
- A half empty shelf is more likely to look unappealing and unprofessional
- If a product is not on display a consumer may assume that you do not stock it and may shop elsewhere

Store Layout Examples

Clear and concise product category destinations help consumers navigate through the store to the product of their choice.

Windows

The entrance to your store has the highest footfall, with windows having an average of 6 seconds to attract attention. This is key opportunity to create a good first impression. Window and planogram direction is provided throughout this VM guide to support you with product and graphic placement.

Visual Merchandising Tips

- Product in the window should be seen from the entrance as the consumer enters the store.
- Product within the window should be refreshed regularly in keeping with the collection theme
- Try to get the right balance of products, a cluttered window is less appealing to the eye, and products can get lost. Make sure key product lines are the focal point.

Below are some window decals to support the launch of the new collections. These can be found on our Digital Asset Storage House (DASH).
